And the whole shooting nation is boffled up as far as white is concerned forcing discards. The critical lead is always the third trick from the last, but there is one exception to this rule. If, after the force, when only one opponent is to be forced partner has high cards in both suits to be forced so that he can be put in with the discarded suit, the fourth trick from the last will do for the force.

"Any other situation, such as being compelled to force both adversaries, or when partner has lait one high card, will always demand the forcing discard on the third trick from the last
